

Chad Raines' synth-punk behemoth The Simple Pleasure has had many live iterations over the years, utilizing the talents of the versatile artists in his sphere as an ever-evolving roster to blast forth his subversively pop compositions. Already an acrobatic frontman on guitar and vocals leading his army of beats and synths, most recently he has joined forces with artist Admiral Grey on bass and supporting vocals to create a tight live power duo whose ecstatic and sweaty live performances aggressively finesse their way into your pants with a sound and energy that lies where the lines of Prince and The Cramps intersect.

Their October tour will take them around the northeast for three weeks with a multimedia show comprised of new art-pop jams, video projections and their usual gender-bending costumes and swagger.
